Custom Spray Tanning uses a Spray Tanning machine to apply a cosmetic tanning solution that contains dihydroxyacetone (DHA). DHA is a non-toxic sugar, derived of sugar beet and/or sugarcane. Each individual is unique, therefore clients who have sensitive skin may experience a minor rash.

Hormonal changes such as the menstrual cycle and menopause can also effect the results of the spray tan. Opulence Spray Tan club cannot guarantee the results of a spray tan, as every individual is different.

The solution can rub off on clothing, however the use of a mild detergent will take out any color that has transferred to sheets and clothing.

If you have a skin disease(s) and are using medications, please check with your physician before receiving a spray tan. Please notify your Tanning Consultant if you've had any intense treatment such as a chemical peel or have been using strong chemical compounds on your skin.

Keep in mind if you have recently had a peel or are currently using Retin-A or a Retinol you can peel in surrounding areas around the area that you had a peel or applied Retin-A. Oftentimes the Retin-A /Retinol moves to other areas around the area that you put the product on and it will cause peeling in that area as well. Therefore it is advised to not spray tan the area in which you've had a recent peel or applied Retin-A/Retinol.

Our Formula does NOT have any UV protection. Use SPF sun protection

Although there have been no reports of side effects, pregnant women must first obtain written approval from her doctor in order to receive a Opulence Spray Tanning service.
